RETAILER SNAPSHOT

Sobeys is committed to not selling "any seafood species that have major sustainability issues associated with them". This means it avoids sourcing species listed as endangered or critically endangered by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), seafood sourced from high-risk fisheries that are not engaged in an improvement project, or products from suppliers known to engage in illegal, unreported or unregulated (IUU) fishing. Whenever possible, Sobeys sources wild-caught products that have been certified by the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) and farmed products that have been certified by the Aquaculture Stewardship Council (ASC) or Best Aquaculture Practices (BAP). Sobeys has not recently published information on the progress it is making against its commitments, but it has started a new data collection program that will track procurement against its commitment and plans to publish a public report in 2020.

In terms of social responsibility, Sobeys expectations are that the people who catch, farm, and process their seafood products do so under "accepted global standards for safe and fair working conditions", and suppliers in "at risk" countries must provide independent audits that they are meeting this expectation.

SeaChoice recognizes Sobeys' data collection program which includes the species' scientific name, geographic origin and method of production for all fresh, frozen and private label products, and encourages it to expand its program to include canned tuna and other shelf-stable seafood products. SeaChoice also recommends that Sobeys voluntarily include more information, such as scientific name and geographic origin, on its seafood labels so that its customers can purchase seafood that is in line with their values and preferences.

In the process of developing this profile, SeaChoice corresponded with Dawn Snyder, Sobeys' Frozen and Processed Seafood National Category Merchant.
